History of '94.

OME men are blessed with a complete unconsciousness of themselves and their good works; others are conscious perhaps of their good deeds, yet have no concern that mankind should recognize them with marks of popular approbation; while others, forgetful that modesty is a cardinal virtue, vaunt themselves of all the really admirable things which they may have done and arrogate unto themselves the credit of good deeds not their own. From the first two classes the world's great men with very few exceptions have been taken. And it is men such as these whom we most admire and love in our friendships. On the other hand, with the last class is the home of all pretence and insincerity. Such men as individuals are self centered; as a company, they are full of a class spirit which, incapable of recognizing the true merits of any company other than their own, flatters itself that it is true and genuine loyalty merely because it is fond of everlastingly babbling the praises of the clan. On the street corners, in places of public resort, at the table, the less enthusiastic world must listen to this endless prating. It is quite impossible for such people to understand that there may be something of value in others, if it is not advertised after their own fashion.

We can find no fairer representative of this species of class spirit than that shown by '94. Of her Freshman year our knowledge is second hand but in perfect keeping with her subsequent history. Her Sophomore fall was largely occupied in fruitless search for base-ball artists to meet the Freshmen. Failing in this, she sought high and low for athletes against the coming on of the fall meet. Having succeeded in presenting on the field a motley crowd collected from all directions, she proceeded to insure them against defeat by judicious handicapping. A natural result was an overwhelming victory over '93 which placed its dependence largely on one man, and over '95 which was of course at that time in a state of no athletic organization at all. And then, by the Immortal Gods, did this ancient seat of learning ever hear the like of such vaunting as followed! An intensely partisan and sensational paper in the moment of victory after a hotly contested political campaign would be retiring in comparison. However this was "true '94 spirit" and we must be duly reverential.

Of her Junior year we can say but little. During this period '94 was in a state of mental abstraction, lost in reflecting with admiration on that athletic victory, we presume. At all events, but for occasional flashes of the all-predominant self-adulation her position in college would not have escaped the misfortune of complete oblivion.

Her Senior year has thus far been passed in much the same way as the other three. We can only predict the remainder of the year from the data furnished from her past history, and we will leave this to our readers, for the problem will not be difficult. Here we must leave her and patiently wait for that flash which is expected to follow her advent to the world.

History of '95.

'94'S AEGIS was graciously pleased to observe that '95 had not been "Even a brilliant failure." Now a natural consequence of reading a criticism of this nature is the question, "Who is the critic and from what stand-point does he speak?" Manifestly, men's conceptions of success and failure widely differ. We feel obliged to demand of our predecessors on the editorial staff of this annual what were their ideas of the quality of success. The class which they represent has been remarkably successful in cribbing both examinations and recitations and accepting the mark thus obtained with a sweet smile of conscious merit. It has been equally successful in picking up an occasional victory on the field of college sports by dint of faithful handicapping. And more than anything else it has made a most unqualified success of "blowing its own horn." Did the editors mean by "failure," failure in these lines? From the evidence, we take it that they did so construe the meaning of the word. Well, then, we grant that '95 has made a decided failure, but we trust that future classes will throw over our weakness a veil of charity.

'95 does not ask to be considered the one and only first magnitude star in the thickly studded Dartmouth constellation. Indeed she makes no claims at all: the different college records will show her deeds, bad as well as good, and she is willing to allow judgment to be passed on them as they stand there. On the other hand, she makes no apologies whatever.

Freshman year was passed with, we trust, no worse than the ordinary characteristics of that year. Our Latin recitations during the last half of the year, perhaps, were more interesting than profitable; and we very distinctly remember some highly disparaging remarks which our instructor made concerning the class in the recitation-room directly over our heads. The cane rush is still a pleasant memory and Clark's supposed attempts to excite another on an unbecoming occasion. The next year '96 introduced a new and rather extraordinary theory of rushes. It was her practice to supplement the fall base-ball games with something which bore a remote semblance to these contests, while for some reason, best known to themselves, her members failed to bring on the usual organized cane rush in the spring. This year saw a decided change in many ways in the matter of class competition—athletics and foot-ball for instance—confirming anew the old statement that, "Some things can be done as well as others."

On the whole, as we look back over the first half of our course, we are very well satisfied with the aspect of things in general and, like Sam Weller's valentine, "Wish there was more." When we first took our seats in Rollins Chapel we felt that we had made a marked forward step in the progress of life. We had already learned to look on Dartmouth in the light of a goal and had begun to cherish a loyalty to her. At the beginning of Junior year, those feelings are deeper than ever; and the fealty we owe the college is softened by a love born of lasting friendships in every class, and strengthened by a grateful regard for revered professors.

The last half of the course begins with the birth of the New Dartmouth over which we are all so enthusiastic, and we confidently hope to graduate on the upward surge of a wave of prosperity which will carry the Mother of us all into the position among American colleges which she held before many colleges now greater than she were so much as dreamt of.

History of '96.

E cannot look upon the story of '96 without wonder that such an incongruous mixture of saints and sinners, of Y. M. C. A. men and genuine toughs could exist. So smitten was she in the beginning with an exaggerated sense of her own importance, that some of her members immediately began a course of coaching for the better instruction of the foot-ball team, though an experienced trainer was already doing work in that capacity to the satisfaction of upper-class men. At the time of the fall foot-ball rushes, it was quite the custom for a mob of Juniors and Freshmen, largely the former, to mix in an undistinguishable mass and persuade themselves that they were having a most exciting contest. This would continue until some '95 man finding it impossible in the din to appreciate the Greek drama or to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest the profundities of Analytic Geometry, would leave his study, mingle in the surging crowd, secure the spheroid and distribute it to his class-mates, then after a quiet chat with each he would resume his interrupted task.

The mob spirit shown by the class during the class base-ball games we pass by as being its own commentary. Neither need we dwell on the revelries by night in consequence of which several Freshmen found their room more in request by the Faculty than their company! such things are best left without comment.

The latter half of Freshman year seemed to indicate that '96 would grow in a perfectly normal manner out of the unsophisticated period of college life into the more polished and courteous years. In other words, she seemed to have learned wisdom. But, alas for our hopes, the first half of her second year is worse than the corresponding term of her first year by as much as Sophomoric exuberancy is more intolerable than the verdancy of Freshmen.

Yet with all this, as there is "Nothing on all sides good," so there is nothing but has its redeeming feature. In many ways the bearing of the Class of '96 has excited nothing but admiration. At several times during the spring term of '93 when class feeling was naturally running high, times when the Freshmen are commonly urged on to unseasonable acts of discourtesy, they exhibited a sense of propriety which was highly appreciated by most '95 men.

~~~~~ADDRESSES BY~~~~~

Dr. E. COWLES, '59, representing the General Committee on Athletics.

M. B. JONES, '94, for the Undergraduates.

PRESIDENT TUCKER for the College.

Alumni Field.

The Alumni Athletic Field.

AMONG the many advantages that Dartmouth's new era has brought with it, none perhaps stand out more prominently before the student's mind than the new athletic field. Though Dartmouth's teams had always won their share of honor in base-ball, foot-ball, and general athletics, without the use of a field such as was enjoyed by its rivals, still it was felt alike by students and alumni that better accommodations were needed. The formation of an Alumni Athletic Committee, first made this possible and plans were drawn up for a field, of which we as Dartmouth students are far from being ashamed.

A foot-ball field, a base-ball field and tennis courts, with tracks for running and sprinting, etc., together with a commodious grandstand, beneath which are dressing-rooms, go to make up a field which may bear comparison with those of our sister colleges and which above all will add a stimulus to our physical training.

The old campus with its many memories of hard fought struggles must ever remain dear to us. At first it seems natural to go there after dinner to see the foot-ball practice and it is certainly hard for some of us to feel at home on the new grounds, but slowly the change is coming about as we watch the daily practice there. The first use to which the field was put was for the class base-ball games. After several good games '95 proved themselves college champions by giving the Medics the first defeat they have suffered for several years. The AEGIS editors hope that the good work may go on, that victory after victory may accrue to the honor of the dear old college. The past has shown that this is possible, for wherever honest careful training has been faithfully undergone by the men, success has been ours.

The interest that the alumni have shown has always been very gratifying to the students, and now it is with pride that we look at our new field, and nothing could seem more appropriate than that it should be called the "Alumni Athletic Field."

From the Sanctum.

THE aim of the different editorial boards of former AEGIDES has been to produce a book which should excel all previous issues. The '95 Board have tried to still further raise the standard by putting more money into the half-tones, engravings and general makeup of the book without raising the AEGIS tax. We do not claim that the contents of the book, either writing or illustrations, are above the average, but certainly we have put much hard work into them, and for this reason, at least, deserve fair success. We do believe, however, that we have produced a book that will be cleaner in the matter of grinds, etc. than any recent issue.

* * * * *

The metamorphosis which Dartmouth has recently undergone seems to mark the beginning of a new era of great prosperity. The introduction of so large a number of elective courses is proving very pleasant to the students who are now enabled to follow out their own preferences to a greater extent than formerly. The addition of departments of History, Social Economics and Biology, the fitting up of a laboratory for Biological research, and the further equipment of the other laboratories, the addition of new dormitories and buildings and the refurnishing of the old, the advent of several new professors, a new president and the largest entering class in the history of the institution together with the most munificent bequests ever made to the college, all these are raising Dartmouth pride, and increasing the spirit of love for the dear old college among the New Hampshire hills.

* * * * *

We all hope that the lesson taught by last spring's teams will be a lasting one. Reference, of course, is made to the Athletic team which, with very few good men, by hard training, won a brilliant victory in the Intercollegiate meet, and to the baseball team, which was composed of star men, and was one of the best college teams in the country, but, because they would not train, disgraced themselves and the college. The students, especially the Freshmen, ought to be more willing, and ready to subscribe to the support of our teams. Even if it does cost you a slight sacrifice, why not inconvenience yourself a little to uphold the honor of the college?

PRESIDENT TUCKER.

VERY AEGIS Board desire to make their work original and to have it differ as far as is possible from other AEGIDES. However in recent numbers there has been a repetition which has not caused the slightest complaint on the part of editors nor readers and that is the biographical sketch of some prominent member of the Faculty. Believing that this custom should be perpetuated, the AEGIS Board '95 looked about for a suitable subject, and though those that merited notice here were by no means few, yet none stood out so prominently in the foreground as our new President.

William Jewett Tucker was born in Griswold, Conn., on July 13, 1839. Fitting for college at the Meriden Academy, he graduated at Dartmouth in the class of 1861. He then taught at Laconia, N. H. and Columbus, Ohio for two years, and studied theology at Andover Theological Seminary from 1863 to 1866. Then he was pastor of the Franklin St. Congregational Church in Manchester, N. H., from 1867 to 1875. It is noteworthy that ex-President Bartlett was for five years the pastor of this same church. From 1875 to 1880 he was pastor of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church in New York City. In 1880 he accepted a call to the chair of Homiletics and Social Economics at the Andover Theological Seminary. It is from Andover as a center that most of Dr. Tucker's best work has been done. He was one of the founders and editors of the "Andover Review." In this review he has published (1889-1891) his elective courses in Social Economics. He was joint editor of the "Hymns of the Faith" which is in use in Rollins Chapel, and is one of the authors of "Progressive Orthodoxy" and of the "Divinity of Jesus Christ." In 1891 he founded the Andover House in Boston which is now doing such a great work and in 1892 he was chosen Orator before the Phi Beta Kappa at Harvard. The oration was published under the title "The New Movement in Humanity—from Liberty to Unity." Dr. Tucker was elected Lecturer before the Lowell Institute, Boston, on "The Influence of Religion To-day," which lectures have been postponed from 1893 to 1894. He received the degree of D.D. from Dartmouth in 1875 and the degree of LL.D. from Williams in 1893. He has served on the Board of Trustees of Dartmouth since 1878.

Such is the brief survey of the life of the man who on June 28, 1893 was inaugurated President of Dartmouth College—a man whose strong mind and rare intellectual abilities mark him as a leader among men, whose kind congeniality has made for him a warm place in the hearts of the students. Under his guidance the affairs of the college seem to be constantly bettering themselves and all things to be working together for a great future for old Dartmouth. President Tucker as a vigorous man in middle life, as a man who has already made for himself an honorable name, gives promise of that steady and sure advancement which has even now begun to weave over him a crown of success. And it is certain that with him goes the hearty good will of the whole college.

Honor to the Brave.

[This famous production was discovered by workmen digging for the Waterworks. We have been offered fabulous sums for the manuscript but still hold it. It is supposed that Longfellow received his inspiration to write "Hiawatha" from this.]

HONOR be to '96 men,"
Cried the students of the college,
"Honor be to every brave man,
Brave are all the '96 men."
If one asked them why this clamor?
They would answer, they would tell you
How the bold bad '96 men
Valiantly came on the campus,
Late at night, when darkness shadowed
The broad land, and all was silence,
Came out with a cane for rushing,
Came out ready for a cane rush.
Weston big and burly stood out
Head and shoulders 'bove the others,
With his voice harangued the others,
Called on all for deeds of action.
Very bold of tongue was Weston,
But within his heart a coward.
There was Bowles, the very strong man,
Telling of his deeds of valor,
Boasting of his farfamed prowess,
How before he came to college
Oft he fought a dozen big men,
Left them mangled in the forest,
Branded by his awful right hand.
With them was a vast assemblage
Filled with daring for the battle.
Awful the mustache of Abbott,
Fear inspiring, dreadful portent
Of the strength that lay behind it.
Hoppy there profanely speaking
Curses on the '95 men.
Moulton, he the very valiant
Leader of the '96 men,
With his gallant form now led them.
Quietly forth on tiptoe went they

Till they came into the campus.
Sound asleep was all the village,
All the students in the college
All except the '96 men.
Then the valiant '96 men,
Crowding closely all together,
Gave their warwhoop on the campus,
And then sped them swiftly homeward,
Trusting only to the darkness.

But the '95 men heard them,
Heard their shout upon the campus,
Rushed forth to the field of battle,
But, alas! it was vacated.
Gone were all the '96 men,
And the '95 men stood there
Laughing loudly at their boldness,
Till at last a '96 man
Crawled out fearful from his culvert
Trembling told the '95 men
That the cane was '96's,
Because boldly on the campus
By a valiant band was carried
Unopposed by '95 men.

Thus it was they won the cane rush,
With no enemy against them,
Yet, tho' they fled forth with terror
At the sound of strife approaching,
Still undoubted is their valor
By the students of the college,
Who assemble in the evenings,
Crying with united voices,
"Honor be to '96 men,
Honor be to every brave man,
Brave are all the '96 men."

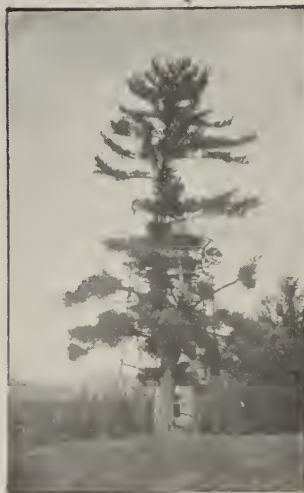

Hallucinations of Misled Mortals.

Of Prof. G. D. Lord, that his courses are popular.
Of Grow, '94, that it is a sin to plug.
Of Wight, '95, that science and mathematics are his specialties.
Of J. H. Bartlett, that the college rests on his shoulders.
Of J. W. H. Pollard that he will captain the foot-ball team next year.
Of Tarbell, '95, that he is a sport.
Of Pillsbury, '95, that he and Lane are the people.
Of '94, that the class is without equal.
Of Amherst, that we are not in it.

A Chinning Incident.

A HOME-SICK Freshman, just arrived in town,
Sat in his room with countenance cast down,
And rued that sad and melancholy day
Which took him from his mother's arms away,
And placed him in this harsh and weary land,
Without a friend to lend a helping hand,
As thus he mused a sudden knock he heard;
The door was opened. With a cordial word
A lordly Senior entered. From his face
True kindness shone and such grace
Was in his talk that when he came to end
The Freshman's heart grew gladsome in a friend.
He noted not that, mid its great variety,
Their talk was of one word "Society."

THREE days passed by ere these two met again;
Three days brimful of sorrow and of pain
They seemed unto our Freshman's mournful mind.
He longed for sympathy and interest kind.
He, thinking thus, was walking down the street,
When lo! his Senior friend he chanced to meet.
"Oh, now," thought he, "my cares will flee away
Just as they did on that eventful day
When first his noble, saintly voice I heard,
And felt my heart grow lighter at each word."
The Senior passed, but did not seem to see
The Freshman's hand held out so cordially,
While o'er his features came a look of scorn
Which caused the Freshman many days forlorn.

YOU ask the reason why the Senior changed?
He, all the Freshman's choices, had arranged.
When the Freshman did not his words obey
But chose to pledge in quite another way
The Senior said, "This Freshman did not right,
Forever more is he beneath my sight
For he, who with a Senior disagrees,
Must ne'er expect that man again to please."

The Song of a Flunk.

SCENE. Engineering Room. Chandler Building, March 7, 1893. '95 Calculus Examination. Singer, W. R. L.

WITH pencil placed on the line,
With eyelids heavy and red,
A student sits in a weary rage,
Painfully scratching his head.
Think, Think, Think,
Although his thoughts seem drunk
In a mournful tone from sorrow's dark brink
He hums the song of a flunk.

“THINK, Think, Think,
Till my brain begins to swim,
Think, Think, Think,
Till my eyes grow heavy and dim.
Secants and tangents and sines,
Functions of X and of Y
Seem mingled and woefully mixed,
As through my brain they fly.”

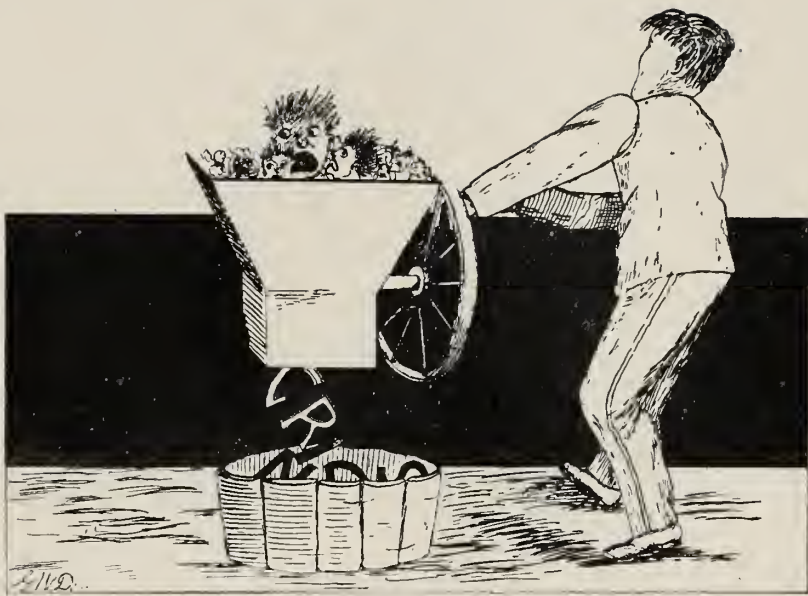

“O FOR a short half hour,
A respite, however brief!
A single look at that green book
Would give me sure relief.
But no such look is given me,
For that Professor there
Looks all about, now in, now out,
His eyes seem everywhere.”

“I'M watching the Professor now,
He sits there in his place,
I see a cruel fiendish smile
Appear upon his face.
He's thinking of my base neglect
And all the cuts I had;
He sees I'm in a flunking mood
And he's far from sad.”

“ I SEE my case is hopeless now,
A crib I cannot find ;
The people round about me here
To help are not inclined.
Oh, how I envy Holden now,
That white-haired plugger there,
He seems brimful of knowledge, too,
While I am in despair.”

WITH pencil placed on the line,
With eyelids heavy and red,
A student sits in a weary rage,
Painfully scratching his head.
Think, Think, Think,

Which makes the hearts of his neighbors sink,

To the Unseen Goddess.

AS in some distant heathen land
The savages tear their bodies,
Suffering awful torture, and
E'en death, for an unseen goddess;

SO is my broken bleeding heart
Now pierced through by love's sharp lances,
Bearing a thousand pains, apart
From my unseen and unknown Frances.

ONLY her photograph I've seen ;
Peculiar circumstances
Taught all I know of my Unseen,
Revealed that her name was Frances.

SO is my broken bleeding heart
Now pierced through by love's sharp lances,
Bearing a thousand pains, apart
From my unseen and unknown Frances—

AS in some distant heathen land
The savages tear their bodies,
Suffering awful torture, and
E'en death, for an unseen goddess.

HANOVER WATER WORKS.

OR many years the people cried
In accents long and loud
"Forbid this village of our pride
Another flaming shroud.
This is a very pleasant place
Where we are called to dwell.
O Town-ship Fathers! by your grace
Avert the threatening hell.
They say that yonder on the hill
A crystal stream is found,
Pray, bring it hither, by your will
And let our joy abound."

For many years the students swore
In accents clear and strong,
"Your college water we abhor,
Of germs it has a throng.
The pump works very hard indeed,
The water gives no cheer,
Your warning words we cannot heed
Concerning wine and beer.
O Ruling-board of wisdom great!
The evils of our well
No human voice can ere relate,
Nor mortal tongue can tell."

At length the Ruling-board awoke,
Alumni gave the cash,
At length the Town-ship Fathers spoke,
"The scheme was far from rash."
Then "Bobbie" Fletcher drew the plan
All in a skillful way,
Soon "Johnnie" Hazen's class began
A most correct survey.
A band of "Dagos" dammed the rill,
A firm enclosure made,
And from the village to the hill
A winding pipe-way laid.

And now ere many days shall go
The crystal stream will come,
And bring its beneficial flow
To college and to home.
The Fiery Fiend no more shall rage
Nor students drink his beer,
Nor squeaking college pumps engage
The long disgusted ear.
The athlete, streaming in his sweat,
May rub his body down,
And true enjoyment clear and wet
Shall flow throughout the town.

THE EXODUS.

IN the beginning the mighty and most dread power, the New Hampshire Legislature, did pass the edict that upon the soil of Dartmouth within the walls thereof should be planted the tribus agricolae.

And it was without discipline or curriculum ; whereupon the power did command order and it was so. And it was void of "rocks," and the mighty saw it and said, Let there be rocks, and there were "rocks" and it was well. And the rulers said, Let there be lights to enlighten the mind of the noble agri-scholarist and there were lights ; one the brighter and more splendid shone by day and the more petty one by night. And their lights could not be hid under a bushel.

A store-house was sore needed, and it was built ; upon the "rocks" was it established, and the storms came, and the winds blew and the horns and the floods descended and beat upon that barn and it fell not, because it was built on the "rocks." Even to the present day it standeth and it is amazing well.

Thus was the college founded and the earth tilled, and the crops harvested ; and faculty and students rested and the host of them in a short respite from all the work they had made. And they blest this time of rest and declared it and they called it vacation, and commanded it to be observed and it was so, is now, and always will be without end.

And these months of a third of the year were the first term.

And the mighty power saw what had been done, and behold it was accurate and very pleasing to look upon but it still wanted and wanted still. It was lonesome and wanted company and it needed it sore. And a help-meet it needed and the rulers commanded, and behold ! the co-ed came, and it was well and the people declared it was out of sight.

And herein was the beginning of husbandry, which has increased more and more and is still increasing into the present day.

And three months thereof were the second term.

Now the children of agricola waxed mighty and strong in the Dartmouth [they, be-Gunn to wack(s) in foot-ball but the Gunn went off without harm, (Revised Version)], and they increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty, so that the college was filled with them.

Now there arose up a new King (Prex) over Dartmouth which knew not where-with he had to deal.

And he saith unto the directors : Look ye ! and hearken unto my saying, for behold the children of the people of the farm are more mightier than we. Hasten the day that we may deal with them wisely lest they so multiply and it come to pass that when Amherst or her allies come up to war with us, or play ball, they turn against us and leave us desolate.

And his words were heeded, so he set over them task-masters to afflict them with plugging and grievous labor.

Therefor was the work-shop founded and the Aggies forced to build treasures and forge chains for their masters. But the more they were afflicted the more they multiplied. And the students grieved the children of the soil, and sought to destroy them by cheering K. U. A. when with the soilers they did play, whereupon the soilers arose in wrath and scathingly did answer, Whereof is this thing ye do to us thy equals? we will not longer grace thy campus or enter into thy sports. Now there arose a leader among them, one John (not the Baptist), who gathered all the tribes together into one place and did thus harangue them :

“Fellow countrymen : By Gad ! this is the last straw ; we will no longer support their teams or sit with them in council, or worship in their company.

“We will get us up out of this hostile land and seek freedom on a foreign shore.”

And the mighty power looked upon their wrath and bondage and spoke to the chosen and said : Pack your trunks, fold up your beds and come to the chosen land that flows with milk and butter.

And they departed hence singing mournfully :

Tell them at “Old Dartmouth” when our forms they see no more,
That we are down at Durham, fair Durham by the shore.
Break it to them gently, tell it to them low
That we went down to Durham where we said we’d go.
Tell them when they come to us and want to play us ball
That we with a piercing “raw ooh raw !” in the dirt will wipe them all.

Verses á la Mode.

According to recent usage it was expected that this department would flourish terribly. Happily but three scraps have presented themselves; two triolets, and the other of the What-is-it? order.

A WALL FLOWER.

WHEN she asked, "Won't you dance, sir?"
I wanted to so,
That I just couldn't answer,
When she asked, "Won't you dance, sir?"
So she said, "What, you can't, sir?"
I couldn't say, "No,"
When she asked, "Won't you dance, sir?"
I wanted to so!

A LATE LOVER.

WHEN the lovely maid did yawn,
And her teeth dropped out,
All, save only he, had gone
When the lovely maid did yawn,
Soon he knew would come the dawn,
But, by Jove! how he did shout,
When the lovely maid did yawn,
And her teeth dropped out!

THAT BEAUTIFUL COOK.

I know a fair kitchen mechanic,
Who sets my heart in a panic,
For her smiles are so sweet,
When we pass on the street—
Though, in truth, she is not Puritanic!

Personal Reminiscences.

MATT JONES.

[The AEGIS has obtained in the course of repeated interviews with Mr. Jones, the following Personal Reminiscences. The reader will please attribute any failure to do justice to our illustrious fellow to his remarkable disinclination to talk.]

I WAS born in Waitsfield, Vt., about ten miles from the State Capital. So you see, like Demosthenes, Cicero, Daniel Webster, Abraham Lincoln, James G. Blaine and Tute Worthen, my earliest recollections are those of the independent farmer. As a boy, I was cock-o'-the-walk on my native greensward and early gave promise of the great things to come. I gained the rudiments of that culture in which I am now master at the "deestric school." In the fall of 1887 I went up to St. Johnsbury to go to school at the academy, and here my glorious career really began.

Once in my childhood's early days, a strolling phrenologist put up over night under my father's roof. When his eyes first rested on my classic brow, the poor man went off in a dead swoon. Actually, sir! And when he recovered, he raved, as if inspired by the god, on the destiny marked out for me as an orator and foot-ball artist.

But to return to my story, my course at St. Johnsbury was a howling success in all departments; I was especially marked out by the principal as a true example of the moral young man. Though my athletic prowess was an aftergrowth, still I was manager of academy athletic teams galore. I led my class, was editor of the academy paper, etc., etc., etc.

St. Johnsbury, however, soon became too small to hold me and my powers called me into the larger sphere of Dartmouth College, just as, I suppose, "Dan's" called him. "Howsomever," I found myself in Hanover in the fall of '90 with the great future all before me. As the divinely regulated laws of the universe ordered, I fell into '94 (though, I suppose, the force of mutual attraction would have made me so do if the laws hadn't). Well, I soon became affectionately intimate with E. Hall, H. Ide, T. Harley, E. Wright, D. Hall, D. Field, P. Marden, Q. Blakely and J. Bowers. Afterward I extended the circle of my favorites to include H. Pollard, P. Mitchell and C. Webster.

My reputation with the Dartmouth professors has always been of a high order. Some say this is due to my assiduous chinning, but I think the faculty were prepossessed in my favor from the first. Chuck said I was a "representative under-graduate," when I opened the athletic field with the assistance of Dr. Tucker, Dr. Cowles and Mr. Paul. I got the spurs in '94 Junior Honors, but you know such things don't signify much. Together with "Hob's," whose affection for me and Decker and J. Bartlett has been a subject of comment, I founded a very exclusive society here which some say is indecent without being funny, but I suppose they are envious.

Altogether I think I might well say that my career has been really glorious, and possessing "the true '94 spirit" in the degree I do, that I have been a decided credit to my class.

JOHN H. BARTLETT.

[The AEGIS wishes to signify its special obligation to Mr. Bartlett who in press of his literary cares and labors consented to furnish us with this short reminiscence of the most interesting portion of his versatile career.]

THE idiosyncrasies and perplexities of the life of a literatus and practical politician are not sufficiently known to the average college man. Therefore I make these features of my life the subject of this brief narrative, and offer advice drawn from my personal experience.

Undoubtedly the highest honor obtainable in college is a position on the editorial board of the "Dartmouth Literary Monthly." Experience has taught me that to gain this you must begin to write as early as Freshman winter and hand in so many articles, which have been carefully recast, that the Editors can pay their attention to the work of no other person. Thus in my case was the coveted prize secured.

It was a most wise provision of the founders of the college that once in every man's college course, it is his privilege to participate in a presidential campaign. I did not fail to grasp this opportunity and I wielded with vigor my superior education in behalf of the party with which I have cast my lot. You should have seen one of the posters which announced the rally which I conducted assisted by Senator Gallinger. Why! My name was inserted in the very largest type while Dr. Gallinger's was set in pica. Finally: if you wish to gain honor, follow in my footsteps. Take my advice and a self satisfaction will follow which is unparalleled.

A Tale in Rhyme.

CONCERNING WHAT BEFELL AN UNLUCKY LOVER.

A PLEASANT eve in June,
A softly waning moon,
A youth inclined to spoon,
A lass, a shadowed nook,

Where nobody could look.

The hour is getting late,

'Tis time for him to skate,

But still he sits sedate,

In loving tête-à-tête,

The moon has gone to bed.

A blushing rosy red

Is lighting eastern skies

Before the youth doth rise,—

When r-r-rip—his trousers tear—

And blank it ! doth he swear ;

For clinging to the chair,—

The seat of his new pants,

Which by some strange mischance

Had caught upon a tack,

Was torn off from his back.

* * * *

How terrible his plight !

As, coat-tails held down tight,

By backing off with care,

He leaves the maiden fair

In laughter at the sight.

Envoy :—The tale is told,

The story ended.

But Gerry, bold,

His trousers mended,

His place doth hold,

With gall as splendid

As was of old.

Susie Smith.

IN all kinds of weather,
Susie Smith and I
Just go off together,
Never minding whether
Any one doth spy.

SUSIE SMITH'S so pretty
That, when she goes by,
Fellows from the city,
With their phrases witty,
Call her mighty "fly."

"SUSIE SMITH, I love you,"
I observed one day,
"Sure as God's above you,
I sincerely love you—
And I shall alway."

JUST a bit she waited
Ere she answered me—
"Charlie, I was fated,
I think, to be mated
Ever unto thee."

MEN all have their pleasures,
They're delighted with ;
But instead of treasures
Without bounds or measures,
I have—Susie Smith !

Everybody Laughs.

AT Gerould's grin.
At Crocker going to Leb.
At Randall's face.
At Thompson's air.
At Howard's gait.
At Hobbs Pollard's conceit.

When "Phin" is serious.
When Willie Green is mentioned.
When Boynton assists in physics.
When Culley Keay looks dignified.

The College provides three Courses of Study—the Classical, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, the Latin-Scientific, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Letters, and the Scientific, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science. The requirements for admission to each course are specified in the Annual Catalogue, and also the terms of admission by certificate and examination.

Students in the Scientific Course may make such electives as will give them in their senior year the standing of first year men in the Thayer School of Civil Engineering. Graduates of the College are allowed one year's standing in the four years' course in the Medical School.

Tuition fee, $96 yearly. Scholarships, yielding $70 annually, are available for those requiring assistance from the College.

The College library numbers 73,500 volumes. Laboratories are fully equipped for instruction in Chemistry, Physics and Biology.

Bartlett Hall, built and furnished at an expense of $15,000, is for the use of the Young Men's Christian Association.

The Mary Hitchcock Hospital affords the best care and treatment for any students who may be sick.

The Alumni athletic field, just completed, is unsurpassed in the advantages which it offers for athletics.
